The Changing Faces of Health
The face of health is changing in California – though we have vibrant, diverse communities, there are health systems that overlook or are not responsive to cultural needs, a health work force that is not representative of the populations it serves, and an overtaxed community clinic network. The California Endowment is working to improve the health of the vast numbers of underserved populations affected by these kinds of influences.

To illustrate some of our efforts, this annual report targets three programs that support our ongoing goals: Multicultural Health, Health & Well-Being and Access.

Programs we will highlight in this annual report are:

Work Force Development, which supports our Multicultural Health goal;

Disparities in Health, which enhances our work in Health and Well-Being; and

Community Clinics, which helps fulfill our Access goal.

As you read on, you will learn how these efforts are helping to improve the health of Californians. At The California Endowment, we believe that by working together we can make a positive difference in meeting the needs of California's changing faces of health.

Multicultural Health: To enhance the health of all Californians by using the talents, cultures and assets of our multicultural society to improve our health and our health care delivery systems.

Health & Well-Being: To promote fundamental improvements in the health status of California's individuals, families and communities.

Access: To increase access to affordable, quality health services and resources for California's individuals, families and communities.

Committed to the Changing Faces of Health
As the face of health within California is continually changing, The California Endowment is among those who are working to improve the health of the 30 million people who call this state home.

Our fiscal year that ended February 29, 2000, was truly a "leap year." Our assets grew to $3.7 billion. More than 50 percent of all grants made by The Endowment since its creation in 1996 were awarded during this past year – approximately 677 grants totaling $197 million. More than 90 percent of the year's funding was specifically targeted toward low-income and underserved populations, and each of California's 58 counties benefited from grants made by The Endowment. As the largest health foundation in the state, The California Endowment remains committed to its primary goals of Multicultural Health, Health and Well-Being and Access, and our work in both responsive grant-making and strategic programs supports these established goals.

CommunitiesFirst, our primary responsive grant-making program, was a critical part of our work this year – it is often our direct line for hearing the voices of the community. More than $74 million, comprising 188 CommunitiesFirst grants, was awarded to organizations throughout the state last year. Our strategic programs included major commitments to community clinics and to creating partnerships for the public's health, as well as efforts to increase the diversity and cultural competency of the health work force.

To support all these efforts, The Endowment itself continued to grow – we more than doubled our staff. We also reorganized staffing to create better granting and operating efficiencies, and we opened and staffed permanent regional offices in San Francisco, Sacramento, Fresno and San Diego.

In accomplishing all that we did, we owe a great deal of gratitude to our staff, our board and the hundreds of organizations that are the reasons for The Endowment's existence – the local clinics, health care providers, health departments and community-based organizations who work daily to serve the needs of California's underserved.

We are looking for even better results during the coming year. The diversity of California is rapidly increasing. That diversity brings us an opportunity to help in building a healthy, multicultural society. This opportunity will be a core theme in our work over the coming years.

That is why this annual report focuses on three areas in which The Endowment has already made substantial investments, and that represent important components in our strategic program's focus for the coming year – Work Force Development, Disparities In Health and Community Clinics. We're building on the past as we move into the future with the knowledge that these three initiatives address some of the greatest areas of need for the people of this state.

To build our responsive grant-making programs beyond CommunitiesFirst, we are developing a technical assistance program to bolster the resources of our grantees, and will conduct responsive grant-making programs targeted specifically at issues of mental health and healthy aging. As California is such a vast state, we will continue to forge new partnerships with other health funders and foundations that share our commitment to the health of California.

The California Endowment continues to expand and galvanize its grant-making efforts to address the health needs of this state. We realize the face of health within California is changing and we're committed to make it a change for the better.

Sincerely,

E. Lewis Reid
President & Chief Executive Officer, The California Endowment

RESPONDING TO THE COMMUNITY - FIRST

This past year represented the first full year in which the CommunitiesFirst grant-making program was in effect, and the response was extremely positive. As a result, The Endowment awarded more than twice the number of responsive grants it had originally anticipated for the year. In Fiscal Year (FY) 2000, more than 188 grants comprising over $74 million were awarded to community-based organizations throughout the state.

Grants were awarded on a wide range of health issues ranging from substance abuse and mental health programs for youth to providing cross-cultural instruction for traditional healers, helping low-income immigrant families obtain better health resources to helping to start up three nurseries for families in crisis.

CommunitiesFirst's goal is to embrace community driven solutions to persistent and emerging health challenges facing the underserved in California. As The California Endowment's primary responsive grant-making program, CommunitiesFirst encourages community-based organizations to develop and explore new ideas and strategies, test models and build partnerships to improve the health and well-being of the state's individuals, families and communities.

To help ensure that grant-making efforts effectively respond to the unique health issues and needs of California communities, The Endowment maintains five regional offices, and has staff working throughout the state. Grants made through CommunitiesFirst were predominantly directed toward ethnically diverse communities.
Enhancing the health of Californians by strengthening the assets of our multiculturalsociety supports The Endowment's efforts in multicultural health. Work Force Development helps to create a culturally competent health work force that is responsive, sensitive and reflective of California's diversity.
WORK FORCE DEVELOPMENT ENSURES QUALITY CARE FOR ALL

As California's cultural diversity has increased, so has the need for culturally competent care and a work force that is reflective of those changes. In recent years, California has experienced a great surge in population shifts, with Latinos alone increasing from 26 percent in 1990 to 30 percent in 1998. And, while minority populations continue to grow, so do the number of languages. In Southern California more than 120 languages are spoken. Unfortunately, minority health professionals comprise less than 10 percent of the health care work force.

Understanding that language and culture have an impact on health and health care, cultural competency aims to eliminate cultural barriers such as misunderstandings about diagnosis and treatment because of limited English proficiency.

The Endowment has a Multicultural Health goal of enhancing the health of all Californians by using the talents, cultures and assets of our multicultural society to improve health and health care delivery systems. Objectives include addressing work force development, language and cultural barriers, and alternative health practices. In FY 2000, The Endowment granted $3.6 million in interpretive services to reduce linguistic and cultural barriers and $9.3 million toward improving cultural competency.

The Endowment's Work Force Development program is supporting the Multicultural Health goal by seeking to improve health care provider competence in cross-cultural medicine and alternative health practices; providing new and expanded career educational opportunities for under-represented populations in health care and public health; reducing linguistic and cultural barriers to health care; and increasing the diversity of individuals entering California's health work force through scholarships, fellowships or residency programs.

UNDERSTANDING CULTURES: AN IMPORTANT COMPONENT IN CARE

Perhaps no other area of the state brings to life the complexities of California’s diversity and multiculturalism as Los Angeles. One organization that is leading the way to improve cultural competency in the health care work force through work force development is White Memorial Medical Center (WMMC) Family Practice Residency Program in East Los Angeles.

In support of work to develop a comprehensive cultural competency curriculum for faculty and residents that can be replicated by other residency programs, The Endowment provided WMMC with a three-year, $1 million grant. The WMMC Family Practice Residency Program is working to ensure that its resident physicians gain the knowledge and skills necessary to competently care for patients of many cultural and ethnic backgrounds.

"Since the health work force doesn't have enough minority representation, we are training health providers to have the cultural sensitivities necessary for working with minority populations. We've been very fortunate to recruit individuals who have great interest in working with underserved populations as well as learning about cultural sensitivities."

"The grant from The Endowment has allowed us to formalize our teaching in cultural competency and to share the program with our peers to make it much more possible to have cultural competency throughout the health work force," he added.

The WMMC Family Practice Residency Program is recognized as being one of the first residency programs in the country developed to train primary care physicians to become culturally competent primary care providers in state and federally designated Health Professions Shortage Areas. Since its inception in 1988, 80 percent of its graduates have established practices in medically underserved communities and 75 percent of its residents have come from ethnic groups underrepresented in the health professions.

"Given the multiculturalism of California, there is a dire need for cultural competency in the health work force and our goal is to train physicians to be sensitive to the cultural differences which make up our communities," said Luis R. Samaniego, M.D., director of WMMC Family Practice Residency Program.

"Dr. Francisco Molero, resident of White Memorial's Family Practice Residency Program, is among those helping to strengthen cultural competency in the health work force.

Understanding that language and culture may have an impact on health, cultural competency seeks to reduce barriers to effective health care."
Disparities in Health

Reducing racial and ethnic inequities in health is an important part of The Endowment’s work to promote the health and well-being of all Californians.
Latinos living within the United States are twice as likely to die from diabetes as non-Latino Whites. Deaths among young Native American Indians have been shown on average to be up to four times higher than for other California children and youths. Vietnamese women suffer from cervical cancer at nearly five times the rate of White women. Lower income African Americans experience about two times the State's mortality rates (adjusting for age) in five of the 10 leading causes of death in California (homicides, strokes, AIDS, diabetes and certain perinatal conditions).

Health insurance coverage is lower among minorities. Racism and discrimination, poverty, exposure to violence and environmental hazards – all contribute to health disparities.

The California Endowment's Health and Well-Being goal, which promotes fundamental improvements in the health status of California individuals, families and communities, is a vital tool in working to eliminate disparities in health. Objectives of the principle include personal health promotion and disease prevention, management of chronic diseases and conditions, community health promotion and public health systems.

In supporting that goal, The Endowment has created program objectives which include reducing Disparities in Health through culturally appropriate programs, services and policies; pursuing specific Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health 2010 (REACH 2010) health goals (see related story); and creating partnerships with public and private entities.

The goal is to use awareness, prevention and treatment to help improve the health of all Californians.
Children are given the opportunity to explore their talents at Whitney Young Child Development Center—a regranting recipient of the Bay Area Black United Fund, Inc.
As part of the President's Initiative on Race, on February 21, 1998, the nation was committed to an ambitious goal: that by the year 2010, disparities in health experienced by racial and ethnic minorities within six areas (infant mortality, cancer screening and management, cardiovascular disease, diabetes, HIV Infection/AIDS and immunizations) would be eliminated.

To support that goal, in 1999, Congress appropriated $10 million to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to administer the Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health 2010 (REACH 2010) program in support of programs that will eliminate health disparities.

The Endowment awarded the CDC's Foundation a $1.26 million grant in September 1999, to support phase I planning grants for the REACH 2010 initiative within California. Funds are being distributed to support planning and community-based collaboratives, and to establish a prevention infrastructure within communities.

"This project is a precedent for the CDC Foundation in that it sets the tone for how we can partner with organizations to affect change at the community level," explained C. Charles Stokes, president and chief executive officer of the CDC Foundation. "Because of California's unique level of diversity and The Endowment's expertise in that area, the CDC will be able to learn a tremendous amount about reducing minority disparities."

"This partnership has really allowed both organizations to benefit from shared expertise," he added. "On the granting level, this project allowed the CDC Foundation to support three promising programs that we wouldn't have been able to fund."

Those programs the CDC Foundation funded include:

Special Service for Groups: to create a plan to increase the numbers of Asian Pacific Islander women who are screened for breast and cervical cancer in Los Angeles and Orange counties;

Multicultural Area Health Education Center: to develop a model to educate Latinos with diabetes in East Los Angeles on treatment and care for the disease; and

California Black Health Network, Inc.: to provide a plan to reduce cases of cardiovascular disease and diabetes among African Americans in the Alameda, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Bernardino and San Diego counties.

The Special Service for Groups program builds on the success of a coalition of 11 Pacific Islander and Southeast Asian community organizations and providers to address inequities in breast and cervical cancer screening. As part of its work, a coalition is conducting focus groups and interviews with 500 women, men, health providers and community leaders.

"This grant allows us to collect important health data on Southeast Asian and Pacific Islander women for the first time," said Mary Anne Foo, a co-project coordinator for the coalition. "We have a number of community partners working with different ethnic groups to recruit women and interview them."

"Following the interviews and compilation of materials, we plan to use the data to create a community action or strategic plan to improve the rates of cancer screening and management," she added. "Working with the CDC Foundation, The California Endowment and the CDC has been great. All have been very supportive of us on a local level and because of them, we've been able to bring national attention to this problem."
In building California's safety net, community clinics are most often the only health care services available for the uninsured and underserved in both rural and urban areas. The Endowment's support of community clinics helps ensure that access to health services is available to all.
COMMUNITY CLINICS: PROVIDING A CRITICAL SAFETY NET

With 7.4 million Californians lacking medical insurance, the more than 500 licensed community clinic sites throughout the State provide a valuable health care safety net. Community clinics, which offer care regardless of coverage or ability to pay for services, are often the only alternative for many who live in rural and urban areas, and in 1997, they treated 2.3 million patients in the state. In many areas, community clinics serve as a one-stop, central health resource for neighborhoods with services ranging from medical and dental care to counseling and health education.

Changes in reimbursement due to managed care, the increasingly complex technology necessary for providing health care and the growing number of uninsured Californians dependent upon clinic services, represent profound threats for the stability of community-based, clinic systems which are increasingly expected to provide complex levels of care on a minimum of resources. Adding to that is a changing client base in which nearly 50 percent of clinic consumers do not speak English as a primary language. And, although clinics statewide have benefited from the increased availability of public and private program resources, their expenses over the past five years on average have exceeded revenues by more than 5 percent.

It is clear that many clinics are pushed to the limits of their ability to serve effectively.

The California Endowment has a goal of increasing access to affordable quality health services and resources for California's underserved individuals, families and communities by reducing the financial barriers to care, increasing the availability and appropriate utilization of health care services and programs, and improving the quality of health care in California.

Understanding that community clinics often have to react to many ongoing financial, management, capital and community service challenges, The Endowment seeks to shift the focus to one of sustainability, capacity and quality enhancement, expanded community responsiveness and well-managed growth.

Since its inception, The Endowment has worked diligently to support community clinics. It has already awarded more than 70 grants totaling more than $60 million within all regions of the state. The Endowment continues to promote the long-term vitality and organizational capacity of community clinics across California.

For example, in 1999 The Endowment's support of clinic consortia included work with the San Diego Council of Community Clinics and the Alameda Health Care Consortium to increase the ability of community clinics to operate in a managed care environment by improving their ability to purchase and contract with health plans, as well as build upon and improve their capacities. This work not only strengthened the clinics' abilities and resources, but provided them with greater power within health care arenas.
STRENGTHENED INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY IMPROVES DELIVERY SYSTEMS

As part of its efforts to address health concerns of the 30 million people in the state, while supporting grassroots foundations, The Endowment often relies upon local expertise and works with other foundations in "regranti-ng" efforts. Here grants are made to intermediary partner organizations that then award grants on a community-based level to address specific needs.

When the Y2K bug loomed heavily upon the horizon in early 1999, The Endowment formed a partnership with The Tides Foundation to strengthen the information systems and management capacities of community clinics, clinic networks and clinic consortia. An initial grant of $10 million was made to improve and modernize clinics’ information systems which allowed them to not only manage their client's data better, but to improve their operations and resources as well. A Y2K Emergency Response Fund was created and the program's initial success included 96 clinics receiving funds, either independently, or through a consortia. Technical assistance was also provided to more than two-thirds of clinics throughout the state. To ensure that grants were awarded to the areas with greatest needs, a steering committee comprised of 14 stakeholders from rural and urban clinics, as well as other health partners, was formed (see page 70).

"This program is enabling the community and migrant health clinics in California to improve their management information systems with the latest software and hardware available," explained steering committee member Arcadio Viveros, who is executive director of Salud Para La Gente in Watsonville. "Because of the grants that originated from The California Endowment, clinics across California are being given a new start. This program is bringing those clinics to the high level of proficiency that is so necessary to being successful in the 21st century."

One of the recipients who benefited from the program was Anderson Valley Health Center - a small, rural health center located in Boonville, California. The center is the primary health care provider for 3,500 people in a heavily agricultural community.

"This grant brought us into the 21st century," said Judith Dolan, executive director. "We were able to purchase our first real computer system and the related supplies necessary to communicate with the outside world in ways we weren't able to in the past."

"It's wonderful to be able to receive e-mails, files and communications from our health industry colleagues," she added. "And it has helped us to keep up with the information and technology necessary in executing our work."

Based upon "phase I" successes, The Endowment extended the partnership with Tides for an additional $10.5 million grant augmentation. In "phase II," grant monies are being used to move most clinics in the state to a basic level of technology development, as well as to improve the operations platforms of the more sophisticated clinics. The Endowment's support has allowed many clinics to gain the technology necessary to provide quality health care in the 21st century, while improving their abilities to collect data which has led to better health outcomes.

The accompanying notes are an integral part of these financial statements.
1. Organization

The California Endowment ("The Endowment") is a private foundation which began operations in May 1996. The Endowment is exempt from federal income taxes under Section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code ("IRC") as an organization described in Section 501(c)(3). The Endowment’s mission is to expand access to affordable, quality health care for underserved individuals and communities and to promote fundamental improvements in the health status of all Californians. The Attorney General of the State of California has specific oversight authority related to The Endowment’s Articles of Incorporation and certain bylaw provisions.

The Endowment was created as a result of Blue Cross of California (subsequently renamed Wellpoint Health Network, Inc., referred to as "WLP") changing from not-for-profit to for-profit status. Pursuant to agreements between WLP, created as a result of the change, and the State of California Department of Corporations, WLP made an initial cash contribution to The Endowment and issued all of its then outstanding common stock to California HealthCare Foundation ("CHF"). CHF is exempt from federal income taxes under IRC Section 501(a). As CHF sells the WLP stock over time, it must make contributions to The Endowment out of the proceeds from such sales of WLP stock, provided that The Endowment is a nonprofit public benefit corporation in good standing and continues to be an organization described in IRC Section 501(c)(3). CHF must transfer not less than 80% of the net cash proceeds, if any, of any WLP stock sale or disposition on or before the later of December 1 of such year or three months after the receipt of proceeds. See Note 7 for details of contributions received by The Endowment.

2. Summary Of Significant Accounting Policies

Basis of Presentation
The financial statements of The Endowment have been prepared on the accrual basis of accounting.

Cash and Cash Equivalents
Cash and cash equivalents are defined as investments with original maturities of three months or less.
 Investments

Investments, which are all classified as trading securities, are carried at fair value as determined by quoted market prices, or based on quotations of similar securities, or other estimates where market quotes are not available. Investing activities are reported on a trade-date basis. Realized gains and losses are calculated based upon the underlying cost of individual lots. Interest income is recorded when earned. Dividends are recorded on the ex-dividend date. Net realized and unrealized gain/loss on investments is based on the fair value of the assets at the beginning of the year or at the time of purchase for assets purchased during the year and the related fair values on the day the investments are sold with respect to realized gains and losses, and on the last day of the year with respect to unrealized gains and losses.

 Program-Related Investment

The Endowment invests in a project that advances its philanthropic purposes. This program-related investment ("PRI") is valued at estimated net realizable value.

 Property and Equipment

Property and equipment consists of capitalized leasehold improvements, furnishings, fixtures and equipment for The Endowment's offices, and are carried at cost, less accumulated depreciation and amortization of $1,576,800 and $699,500 at February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999, respectively. Depreciation and amortization are computed on the straight-line method based on the estimated useful lives of individual assets ranging from three to five years or the term of the lease.

 Grants

Unconditional grants are recognized as an expense at face value in the period in which they are approved. Grants, which are conditioned on a future uncertain event, are expensed when these conditions are substantially met. There are no conditional grants at February 29, 2000 or February 28, 1999. The following is a schedule by year of payout obligation of grants as of February 29, 2000:

Use of Estimates

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenue and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

3. Investments

Investments are presented in the financial statements at fair value and consist of the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<th>2000</th>
<th>1999</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>

The change in net unrealized gain on investments reflected in the statements of activities and changes in net assets is summarized as follows:

| For the years ended February, |
|-----------------------------|-----------------|-----------------|
|                            | 2000            | 1999            |

| Net unrealized gain/(loss) on investments for the year | 455,589,500 | (63,022,200) |
| Net unrealized gain, end of year | $588,780,700 | $133,191,200 |
In the normal course of business, The Endowment uses various financial instruments, including derivative financial instruments, to maintain desired asset allocations, primarily in fixed income securities. Interest rate futures and options are purchased and sold to manage the interest rate risk on government and corporate obligations. The fair value of interest rate futures is included in investments. Any derivative financial instruments are recorded at their fair value with any changes reflected in income during the period of the change. The Endowment’s investment managers are permitted, under the terms of individual investment guidelines, to utilize such financial instruments. As of February 29, 2000, The Endowment had ten interest rate futures contracts with delivery dates through March 31, 2001 and three interest rate call options with delivery dates through December 18, 2000. All of these instruments are supported by government and corporate obligations.

4. Program-Related Investment

In the fiscal year ended February 28, 1999, The Endowment invested a portion of its funds in a project that advances its philanthropic purposes. The PRI is in the form of a non-interest bearing $20,000,000 loan to a non-profit entity to improve the healthcare conditions of agricultural workers. The duration of the loan is 30 years with the first payment commencing in fiscal year 2004.

5. Commitments and Contingencies

The Endowment leases its office facilities under various agreements. Rental expense was approximately $1,444,300 and $1,196,000 for the fiscal years ended February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999, respectively. The following is a schedule by year of minimum future rental payments related to these leases as of February 29, 2000:

6. Federal Excise Taxes

The Endowment is subject to federal excise taxes imposed on private foundations at two percent, or at one percent if certain conditions are met. The excise tax is imposed on net investment income, as defined under federal tax law, which includes realized gains on the sale of investments. The Endowment qualified for the one percent reduced excise tax for the years ended February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999. Deferred taxes payable are recorded at two percent as the qualification for the one percent rate is not determined until the fiscal year in which the gains are realized. Included in other liabilities are current taxes payable and receivable, net of estimated payments, of $406,600 and $61,100 at February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999, respectively. Deferred taxes payable at February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999 of $11,775,600 and $2,663,800, respectively, are related to unrealized appreciation, and are reflected as a liability until the related investments are sold or there is a change in the valuation of such investments.

7. Contributions

As discussed in Note 1, The Endowment continues to receive contributions from CHF as it sells WLP stock.

At least $80,000,000 shall have been made before the end of the second year, February 28, 1998, including the distributions made in the first year.
At least $100,000,000 shall have been made before the end of the third year, February 28, 1999.
At least $120,000,000 shall have been made before the end of the fourth year, February 29, 2000.
The balance of the $150,000,000 shall have been made before the end of the fifth year, February 28, 2001.

The Endowment must also make certain distributions from certain designated proceeds transferred to The Endowment due to sales of WLP stock by CHF (See Note 1). During the years ended February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999 The Endowment was required to make $65,500,000 and $59,300,000, respectively, of such distributions. These requirements were satisfied.
9. Retirement Plans

The Endowment maintains a qualified 401(k) Employee Investment Plan ("plan"), which permits eligible employees to make voluntary contributions on a pretax basis. The plan allows participants to invest in a variety of investments. The plan was enhanced by employer matching for employees contributing to the plan, following six months of employment. The plan provides for uniform employer contributions of 75 cents for every dollar contributed by a participant up to 6 percent of the participant’s salary deferral contribution. The Endowment’s contributions to this plan for the fiscal years ended February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999 were $179,600 and $88,700, respectively. In addition The Endowment has a defined benefit cash balance plan covering all employees with one year of service. The plan is entirely funded by The Endowment, with contributions based on a percentage of each employee’s annual compensation. The employees are vested 20% each year, with full vesting at the end of five years. Each employee’s account is credited each year with an interest factor, the lower of 5.25% or the interest rate on 20 year Treasury Bonds. At normal retirement age (65) the employee is paid their accumulated amount in the plan, either as an annuity or lump sum, at their election. Upon termination of service the employee may withdraw or roll over their accumulated cash balance.

At February 28, 1999, the most recent actuarial calculation, the Projected Benefit Obligation under the plan was $480,000 and the Fair Value of Plan Assets was $228,000; and Plan assets at market value and the accrued liability on the balance sheet exceeded the Accumulated Benefit Obligation. The Endowment contributed $197,900 and $159,800 to the Plan for the fiscal years ended February 29, 2000 and February 28, 1999, respectively.

The assumptions used in the determination of pension expense and the funded status information are as follows:

- Weighted average discount rate: 7.00%
- Rate of salary progression: 5.00%
- Weighted average long-term rate of return on assets: 9.50%
In order to ensure that The California Endowment makes the best use of grant-making opportunities, advisory committees are often called upon in relation to specific projects. We would like to extend special thanks to some of these "partners in health" for their work with us.
